

Becoming a mother is Becky's biggest dream and she is so excited to begin the journey of parenting and loving a child. I know that she looks forward to showing our child that he/she is loved by all the people in his/her family and also teaching him/her the importance of loving others in that same way. I believe that Becky will be a sensitive and loving Mom.

Why Adoption?

After years of dealing with infertility, we decided to seek support from others who were going through this same struggle. It was at a peer led support group that we first met couples who had children who were adopted. With God's guidance, we realized that the things we most wanted to share with our children were not things that required Becky to be pregnant or even for us to be biologically related to our children.

Every family is unique and we look forward to sharing our child's story with them as they grow up and begin to question things. We hope to have some level of openness with you, the birthparent, as we feel that all children benefit from knowing what love and consideration went into the plan that was made for them. We are open to children of all cultural/racial backgrounds and will find ways to incorporate a child's unique heritage into our everyday lives.

Thank You

Again, thank you for reading our profile. We will continue to pray for health and safety for you and the baby throughout the pregnancy as well as God's guidance as you face these decisions and put together your plan.

Thoughts and Prayers,
